DEAR FRIENDS

Many have recognized that our strength lies in our combination of mission and people. The two are inseparable: Our team of volunteers, supporters, and professional staff have commitment to our mission as a core part of their personal values, and then bring unique combinations of experience, access, resources, skill, and knowledge.

The result is a wonderful collaboration that stretches internationally and includes many of the most accomplished wildlife conservationists of our era. The scientists we work with reflect our unique approach: Instead of simply sending people into the field, we identify conservationists who've already proven that they can create real change for endangered species. Dr. Anne Russon has proven that critically endangered orangutans will occupy recovered forest habitats in Borneo; Dr. Laurie Marker has proven that humans and cheetahs can live side by side in Namibia and other range countries; and Dr. Charles Foley has proven that enlisting local villages in the protection of elephants in Tanzania can bring benefits to both humans and wildlife. What we have proven is that a clear mission, combined with a vision, a plan, resources, and hard work can result in success.

The Indianapolis Zoo empowers people and communities, both locally and globally to advance animal conservation. Our goal each year is to truly reflect our mission in our operational plans. Our success means that the impact of our institution, our community, and our team is being felt around the world as well as at home.

This past year, we opened a world-class exhibit, the Simon Skjodt International Orangutan Center, and we honored a true hero for the planet, Dr. Patricia Wright, with the Indianapolis Prize, the world's leading award for animal conservation. These are just two examples of your Zoo taking a grand, global stage and performing remarkably! Ringing the closing bell at the New York Stock Exchange with Eli Lilly and Company and meeting with representatives from the White House, United Nations and Republic of Madagascar were certainly iconic events, and the Simon Skjodt International Orangutan Center was dubbed a "bucket-list addition" and a "must-see attraction" by national media.

As you read this annual report, please know that we continue to grow in strength, wisdom, and influence upon our community and our planet. We inspire, we empower, we engage, but we couldn't do any of this without your support. You are building a wondrous future, and we are very grateful.

To keep busy; to attract and hold, especially attention or sympathy; to cause to participate; to begin or take part in a venture; to connect or interlock.

“ Get out into the field to experience nature firsthand, whether it's through ecotourism to some exotic destination in Amazonia, Madagascar or another remote corner of our planet, or through volunteer opportunities, education programs or periodic visits to natural areas in your own backyard. Also take advantage of local institutions where you live. I attribute a large part of my interest in wildlife to frequent visits to NYC's Bronx Zoo and American Museum of Natural History. The opportunities are endless. ”

Simon Skjodt International ORANGUTAN CENTER

It was truly an “EPIC” year! National media dubbed the Indianapolis Zoo’s Simon Skjodt International Orangutan Center an “addition to the bucket-list” and a “must-see attraction” in 2014. The Center was the catalyst for a record-breaking year with the highest attendance ever recorded at the Zoo. Most importantly, those guests were drawn in, engaged, enlightened and empowered. Eight sentient beings with remarkable intelligence, charisma and magnetism fueled the fire behind our mission.

Stunning views quickly turned into mesmerizing interactive experiences as hundreds of thousands of visitors from all over the world came face-to-face with an orangutan. The Zoo came to a standstill every time an orangutan swung 70 to 80 feet above the crowd on the Myrta Pulliam Hutan Trail. Jaws dropped while Zoo visitors watched in the Tim M. Solso Learning Studio as orangutans manipulated interactive technology during part of ongoing research into the intelligence of orangutans. Guests spent time in the Efroymson Family Exploration Hub and the R.B. Annis Atrium and quickly learned about the threats facing orangutans in the wild. Orangutans are on a path to become the first great ape species to go extinct primarily due to habitat loss.

The Zoo is committed to not only educating people about the urgent action needed to save wild orangutans, but we also offer an avenue to do just that. As guests leave the Center’s indoor interactive areas, the exhibit turns global and offers visitors an outlet to reach across the world and make a difference. Guests can donate money to help reforest parts of Borneo—which is one of only two places in the wild where orangutans live. In 2014, Zoo guests generously donated more than $17,000 for the reforestation project—one tree at a time.

Perhaps the most significant symbol and call to action is the Nina Mason Pulliam Beacon of Hope. The grand, illuminated structure stands 150-feet tall and reminds us that there is hope for orangutans in our world. Our mission reminds us that we all can do something to help save them.

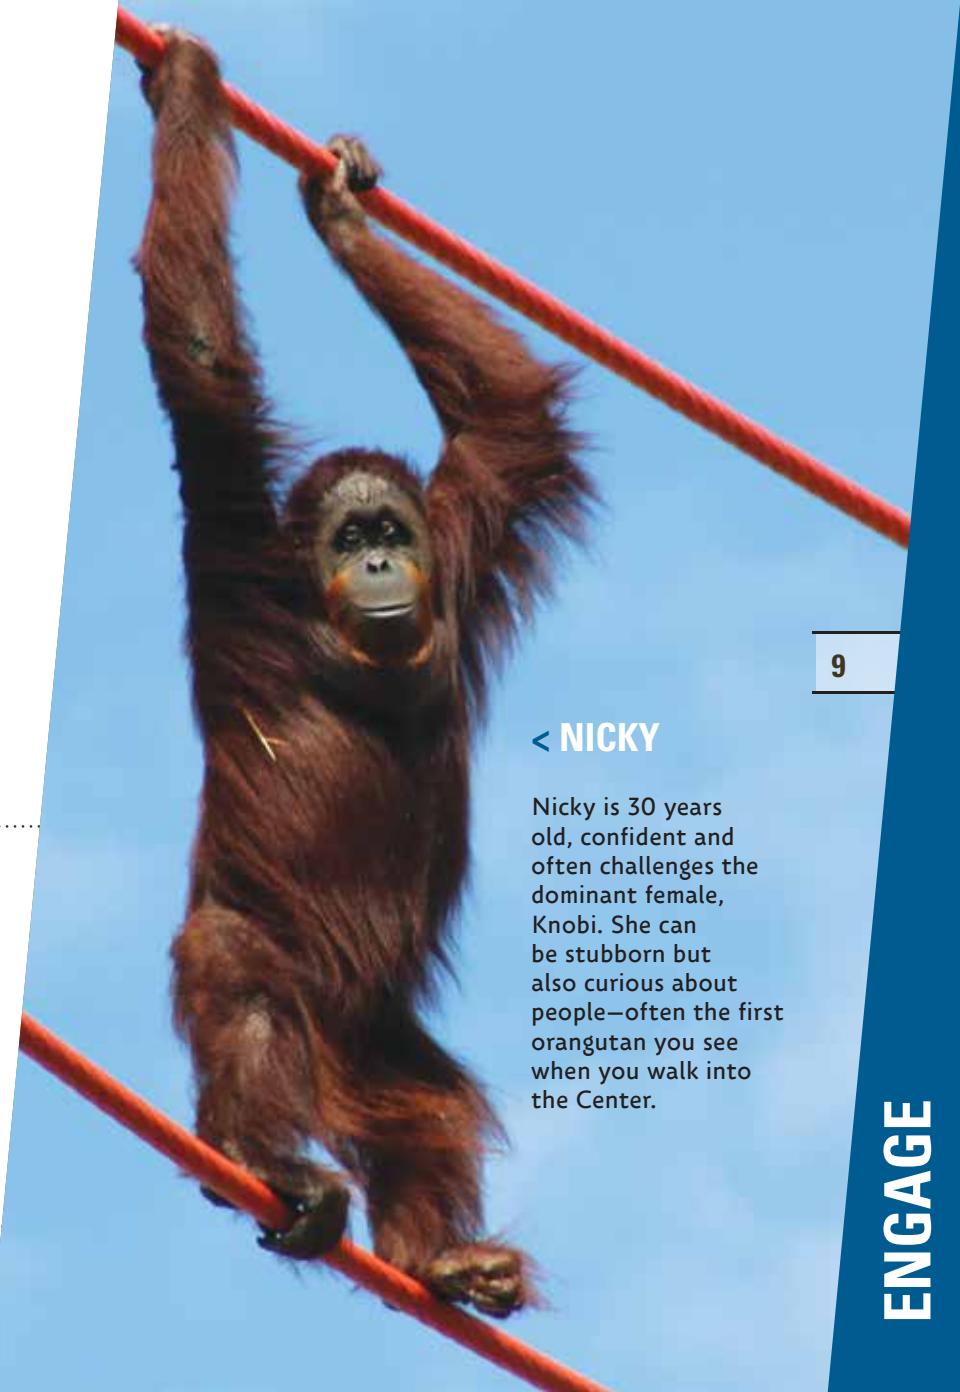

The Simon Skjodt International Orangutan Center, a world-class exhibit, would not be possible without the generosity and caring nature of Hoosiers. The Indianapolis Zoo operates without public tax dollars and is one of the largest zoos in the country in that position. We are kept alive, thriving and relevant because of our benevolent community, our donors’ sense of caring and our sponsors’ values. Philanthropy is what helps guide us toward a successful mission, as well as the hope that our enthusiasm is contagious. We promised to be good fiscal stewards of the $34 million donated to the Campaign for Conservation, and we lived up to the challenge.

indy's orangutan FAMILY

< SIRIH

Sirih is 22 years old and came to us from the Frankfurt Zoo in Germany. She is a pure Sumatran orangutan like Basan. She responds to the German language, so she's hearing a new language with her English speaking Zoo staff.

< NICKY

Nicky is 30 years old, confident and often challenges the dominant female, Knobi. She can be stubborn but also curious about people—often the first orangutan you see when you walk into the Center.

< AZY

Azy is our 37-year-old dominant male. He's extremely gentle with the other orangutans but has no problem breaking up fights between the females. He has a 9 foot arm span and his hands are 18 inches long. He loves opening wrapped boxes and his favorite snacks are fruit, peanuts and cooked onions.

< BASAN

Thirteen-year-old Basan was the newest addition to the Center in 2014. He enjoys playing with water, hiding, and shredding paper. Basan is a full-blooded Sumatran orangutan. We were able to accomplish the first introduction of two unrelated adolescent male orangutans ever in any zoo by bringing together Basan and Rocky.

< ROCKY

Rocky is 10 years old and a crowd pleaser for sure. He is inquisitive with guests and always ready to learn something new. He is obsessed with tattoos and often points to guests, wanting them to show him their "ink!" Rocky is the first great ape to be recorded manipulating his vocal cords, saying the word "what."

< LUCY

Lucy is 30 years old and is 100 pounds lighter since she arrived at the Zoo thanks to our staff, who worked with her on her diet. She has tons of energy and can easily keep up with Rocky. She is a champion nest builder and creates a cozy bed to sleep in each night.

< CHARLY

Charly is 20 years old and loves to build elaborate nests each night with blankets and sheets. He has a playful side, especially when interacting with the keepers. He is picky about apples and will only eat them if they are cooked. He also likes perfume samples from magazines.

< KATY

Katy is 26 years old and is Rocky's biological mother. She is a quick learner, sometimes shy and prefers men over women. She expresses excitement by whistling. She's often waiting in line patiently to get her time in the learning studio to work with Dr. Rob. She likes to put buckets or other objects on her head and loves apples, sweet potatoes and peanuts.

KNOBI >

Our dominant female is 35-year-old Knobi. She has a strong bond with Azy and likes to clean and collect trash and debris in a container. Knobi adopted Rocky and taught him how to behave like an orangutan. She will not eat tomatoes.

engaging YOUTH

One of our most essential outreach tools to engage children and ensure the Zoo's mission is fulfilled, is the Polly H. Hix Institute for Research and Conservation. Through Hix educational and hands-on programs, we are reaching all generations and communities in our efforts to promote sustainable behavior, protect wildlife and wild places and spread knowledge. Thousands of children experience free trips to the Zoo and workshops thanks to our generous donors.

2014 indianapolis PRIZE

What began as a simple question, a mission-driven idea 12 years ago, has grown into the internationally renowned and world's biggest award for animal conservation, the Indianapolis Prize. The simple question was: What can we do that will truly make a difference in saving the lives of endangered and threatened animals all over the world? Many partners, plans and years later, the 2014 Indianapolis Prize stepped onto a global stage to spread the word about the need for saving wild things in wild places.

The 2014 Prize winner embodies what we think it takes to advance animal conservation. Dr. Patricia C. Wright is relentless, passionate, patient when needed, a teacher, a survivor and devoted. Wright loves lemurs and has dedicated her life's work to the most endangered mammal on Earth. Wright transformed Madagascar's park system to ensure safe, protected habitat for lemurs. She championed the survival of the island's most famous animal despite setbacks from timber exploitation and cultural barriers. Wright has created a solid legacy and model for conservation that is used successfully around the world.

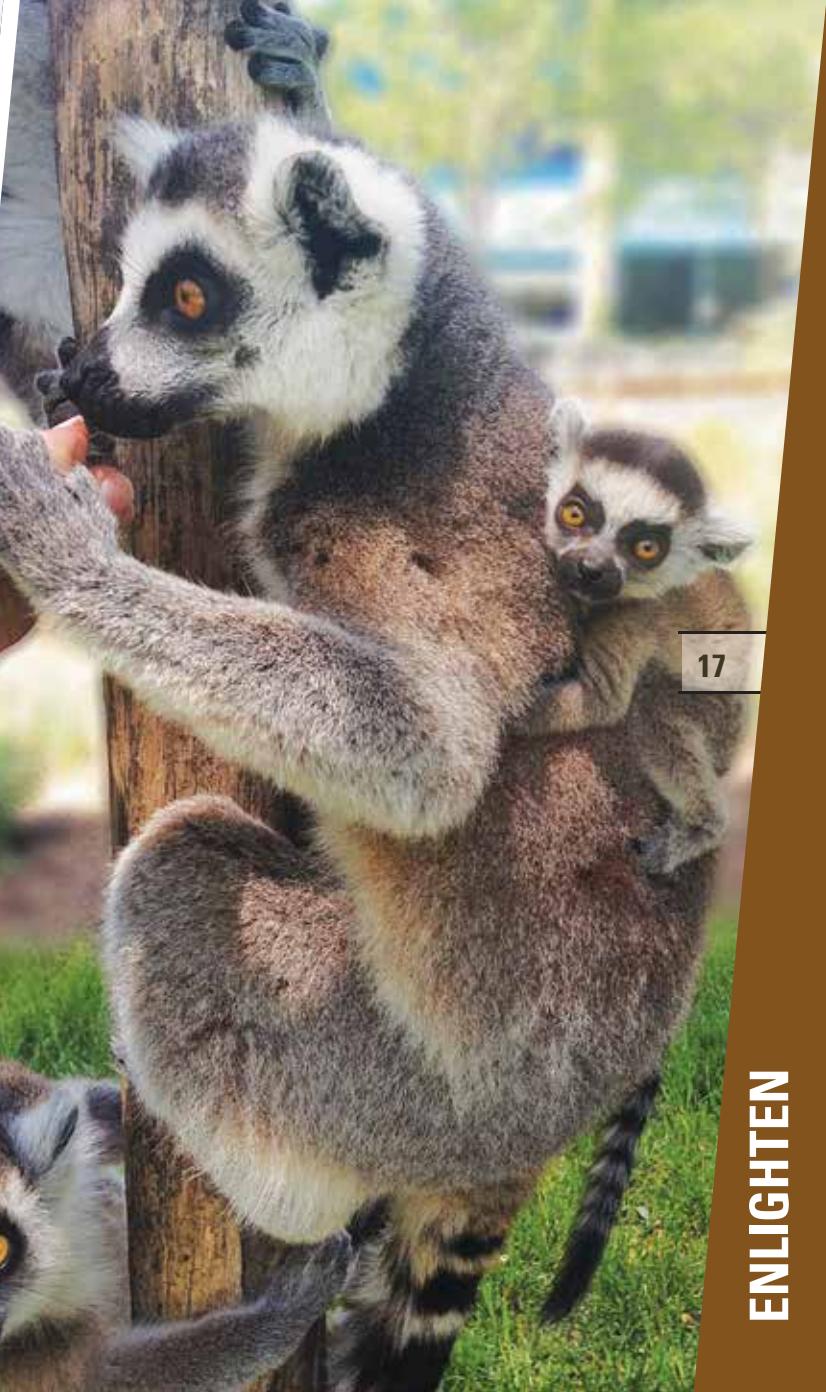

The 2014 Indianapolis Prize far exceeded initial outreach goals. The Prize reached more than 1.14 billion people, as well as more than 3 million Facebook impressions. The Prize team and winner held audience with representatives from the White House, United Nations and Republic of Madagascar on our media tour.

Wright, along with our partners at Eli Lilly and Company, closed the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) on Endangered Species Day. On top of the NYSE platform, the most endangered mammal, a lemur, sat atop Wright's shoulder as she closed the exchange for the day. Partnering the NYSE with animal conservation may seem an odd juxtaposition, but the connection between healthy economies, governments and conservation is an integral part of the ability to save magnificent creatures like Amur tigers, orangutans and lemurs in the wild.

Thanks to our generous friends at Cummins, Inc., the two-year Prize cycle wrapped up with a glitzy gala, crowded with 1,000 guests all there to meet the heroes of our planet. Dr. Wright and the five finalists were honored and their tireless work highlighted in videos shot on the front lines of conservation. From Madagascar to Mexico, the videos—featuring struggles, commitment and triumphs—transported the audience into the world of a conservationist. For the first time, the Prize was increased to $250,000 and each finalist received $10,000.

tiger cub & zoo BABIES

We've been known to call ourselves wildly different. We find stripes, tusks, webbed feet and bristles adorable. But beneath all that cuteness lies a purpose. Each new arrival at the Zoo gives us an opportunity to engage, enlighten and empower our guests to advance animal conservation. On July 10, Zoya, our baby tiger cub, joined the family. She draws "Oohs" and "Aahs" from Zoo guests and gives us the opportunity to help people fall in love with her. Then, we hope, people will want to do something to save her kind in the wild. It is estimated that only 500 Amur tigers remain in the wild. Zoya is a powerful cub (all teeth and claws) but her strength really comes as an ambassador to motivate people to make a difference in saving wild things in wild places.

Just in time for lemur champion and Indianapolis Prize winner Dr. Patricia C. Wright's visit to the Zoo, our lemur troop grew by one. Wright proposed some names for the lemur baby and our Facebook fans voted in favor of "Maki," which is a Malagasy term meaning "lemur."

Fluff and tusks also helped gather some attention to our Zoo baby population. For the first time, Caribbean flamingo chicks hatched at the Zoo—three to be exact. At birth they sported gray-white plumage but are now fully pink. A little more rugged additions to the baby bunch were four warthog piglets. Zoo guests enjoyed watching lots of dashing, digging and flying dirt.

advancing animal CONSERVATION

Our mission drives us to make a difference locally and globally. Our outreach stretches across the world, assisting and monetarily supporting nearly a dozen proven organizations doing remarkable work to save the animals facing the most extreme threat of extinction. Our support of scientists in the field is essential in the commitment to help preserve unique animals and their habitats for future generations.

ORANGUTAN KUTAI PROJECT

The Zoo supports the Orangutan Kutai Project in the Kutai National Park in East Kalimantan, Borneo. The project started in 2009 in an effort to protect the seriously endangered orangutan population and recover critical habitat. Dr. Anne Russon leads the project. She has studied orangutans for more than 30 years and her work is featured in the Simon Skjodt International Orangutan Center.

INTERNATIONAL UNION FOR CONSERVATION OF NATURE (IUCN)

The Indianapolis Zoo provides financial support to IUCN's climate change vulnerability assessment of tree species in Borneo. The assessment studies trees for viable species survival.

AMUR TIGER CONSERVATION PROJECT

The Zoo supports the work of conservation partner Dr. Linda Kerley and the Amur Tiger Conservation Project in Lazovsky District in Primorsky Krai, Russia. The Indianapolis Zoo's support paid for 15 vitally important tracking cameras that give Kerley long distance insight into the lives of the last few remaining wild Amur tigers on Earth.

DIAN FOSSEY GORILLA FUND INTERNATIONAL

The Indianapolis Zoo is proud to support the Dian Fossey Gorilla Fund International. Fossey was a true conservation hero who fought to preserve and protect mountain gorillas. She was found murdered in her cabin in Karisoke in 1985.

INTERNATIONAL ELEPHANT FOUNDATION

The International Elephant Foundation is composed of Association of Zoos and Aquariums member zoos and other facilities whose elephants are wildlife ambassadors helping to educate the public and raise money for elephant conservation.

CHEETAH CONSERVATION FUND

Cheetah: The Race for Survival exhibit helps Zoo guests support Dr. Laurie Marker, founder and executive director of the Cheetah Conservation Fund (CCF). This year our "Race a Cheetah" activity raised $12,245 for Marker's foundation. CCF is headquartered in Namibia and its groundbreaking work focuses on the conflict between livestock farmers and cheetahs.

CENTRE VALBIO AT STONY BROOK UNIVERSITY

Support from the Zoo helps Centre ValBio work to protect unique biologically diverse ecosystems through conservation science and projects that directly benefit the local people of Madagascar including rural health care delivery.

MASSASAUGA RATTLESNAKE CONSERVATION

The Indianapolis Zoo is participating in and helping fund a field census project on the Massasauga rattlesnake. The snake's populations have declined making it necessary to work to avoid possible extinction.

MADAGASCAR FAUNA SUPPORT GROUP

Lemurs are the most critically endangered mammal on the planet. The Indianapolis Zoo supports the efforts of the Madagascar Fauna Interest Group to save lemurs and their habitat from destruction.

MIGRATORY BIRD CONSERVATION

We have taken an active role in an ongoing research project on the grounds of the Indianapolis Zoo. The goal of the project is to mitigate bird strikes with the goal of conserving migratory bird populations.

TARANGIRE ELEPHANT PROJECT

The Indianapolis Zoo has been providing financial support to the Tarangire Elephant Project and its director, Dr. Charles Foley, since 2007 for his amazing work to save the elephants in Tanzania by protecting their migration corridors and creating one of the largest elephant identification databases in Africa.

Our relentless pursuit of our mission guides us to the most endangered creatures and the people who are committed to changing the future for these animals. It is estimated that a staggering 96 elephants in Africa are killed by poachers for their ivory tusks each day. The Indianapolis Zoo joined forces with the global conservation partnership called 96 Elephants.

Indianapolis Zoo camp kids helped spread the word: Stop buying ivory and stop killing the most majestic animal on Earth. Our campers were featured nationally in a Huffington Post Green blog, holding their 96-foot-long chain, created with more than 1,000 messages and hand-drawn elephant pictures. A video of the kids carrying their chain was also featured nationally and internationally.

With the United States ranked second only to China as the largest ivory market worldwide, efforts close to home carry an immense impact for this vulnerable species. This camp program demonstrates how we have a global reach—we can make a difference a world away.

DEAR FELLOW ZOO SUPPORTERS

We wanted to close out the Annual Report with some introspect – impressions and reflections on what was a record-breaking and impactful year. The world certainly heard about our value-driven efforts and news-worthy outcomes—from the world-class Simon Skjodt International Orangutan Center’s grand opening to starring on a global stage during our Indianapolis Prize tour. There was no shortage of headlines, but the most important factor of our extremely visible year was that our mission of advancing animal conservation was on the forefront of each story.

We are a like-minded group of people, dedicated to the execution of our mission. Saving animals from extinction is what we do and we align ourselves with people who have a proven successful track record from their work in the field to preserve wild things in wild places. In order to be able to do all that, your support was essential to our success and we thank you for your trust in us. Together, we can support and initiate wildlife conservation all over the world.

We will continue to push the message of our mission in the years to come. We will continue to fight to be relevant in the ever-changing world of communication. As people expect, seek and consume information flow on their terms, we will keep our message on the forefront. We're glad you will be with us for the journey.
